Through our Turnaround Panel

PwC Turnaround Panel

PwC works with management to deal with financial underperformance by stabilising the business, managing key stakeholder relationships and building a strong platform for the future.

Recognising that management teams may lack experience in turning around a business, PwC acts as a catalyst for the introduction of experienced turnaround professionals who can step into executive or advisory roles in the business such as chairmen, CEOs, CFOs, chief restructuring officers, operations, marketing, human resources, non-executive directors and advisers/mentors to boards.

PwC has immediate access to candidates from our own network of independent turnaround professionals, all used to operating at board level in businesses in crisis and those requiring rapid change.

Who is on the Panel?

The common theme is that these executives have “done it before”, bringing their sector and situational skills to bear rapidly and effectively to a stressed situation.

While Turnaround Directors have a duty of care to the company which engages them, they are focused on maintaining strong relationships with key financial stakeholders.

PwC's Turnaround Panel has access to over 300

independent executives

The Panel's strengths lie in:

Selection

All members of the Turnaround Panel are put through an interview and referencing process to establish credentials and suitability.

Placements

The breadth of our Turnaround Panel enables us to find suitable candidates for most situations.

Support

Turnaround Directors are independent operators but are supported by the full range of professional services that PwC has to offer, should our services be required.
