Restructuring

Public sector clients are facing up to the tough choices brought on by the public sector squeeze. By adapting turnaround experience from the private sector, some organisations have reduced costs and at the same time maintained service levels.

Getting back in the black – No “one size fits all” solution
There is no standard solution. We work with each client to support decision makers through the whole turnaround journey, bringing in the right specialists at the right time.

Possible solutions
• Making it easier for underperforming organisations in an environment of very tight cash, rapidly identifying practical solutions and helping stabilise a challenging situation;

• Solving cash and working capital management e.g debt collections;

• Bringing clarity to a financial situation where the status quo is not sustainable, by interpreting financial information and the options available to allow informed decision making;

• Assessing and helping deliver exit/merger opportunities, where appropriate;

• Dealing with banks who offer overdrafts and funding to public sector clients;

• Reviewing financial strategies and assessing the baseline position to enable robust re-prioritising of financial budgets;
• Rapid “hands on” implementation and stabilisation through our Programme Management Office, applying private sector situational skills to crisis situations in the public sector;

• Providing support to align stakeholder interests in situations where there are economic or political interests; and

• Identifying and introducing independent Turnaround expertise from the PwC panel of Turnaround specialists.
